The google form is also on our website! We have included all the CCP information for our partner colleges and other important information for students and families!

U.S. Department of Education's Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA):

All students enrolled in a college or university, regardless of age, have the right to keep their information private and, without authorization, the college is prohibited from releasing this information to anyone other than the student. That means the college can only talk to the student about his/her personal and academic information.

Parents do not reach out to college faculty to discuss academic concerns. Students must talk to college professors themselves, as professors are also bound by FERPA. If parents believe their student is experiencing any type of academic distress, they should encourage the student to reach out their professor or their CCP advisor.

Parents may speak to CCP advisors and professors if they complete the FERPA form allowing them access to the student's information. Each college has a different process for completing this form! See your advisor for more information!
